The brain is the source of all our thoughts, emotions, personality, and behavior. Everything we experience in life, every decision or action we make, can be traced back to our brain. Of special interest to us as parents & educators is how a child's brain develops and its implications on learning & development at the various stages of their life.

Coffee Talk Session is recommended for parents who may not have the time to attend the half day workshop however, would like to get some tips on how to better our parenting skills.

Workshop outline

The workshop will cover the following objectives:

- Understand the developing brain of children in their various stages & the various age-appropriate engagement techniques we can tap into to connect with them
- Identify our own thinking attributes & how this affects how we parent our children, relate to others and approach life.
- Understand our behavioral attributes & how this affects how we manage our children and how others perceive us.
- Value our uniqueness & the uniqueness of those we work and live with.

Hear from the participants:

- "Hi Debbie, Thanks for an enriching "lesson" on the importance of self re-discovery in order to make me more aware that just as i am the way i am because of brain development and experiences I have had, my growing preteen daughter is also the way she is now because of her brain development stage, exposures and experiences from birth to now. The tips and facts help me as a parent to be more giving and be more reactive than negative towards my child. Certainly also useful in trying to immerse into her world and then use my own experiences and responsibility as a parent to help and guide and not dictate her growth and maturity. Thanks again."
- "Thanks for teaching us how to be better parents by communicating better with our children"
- "I was happy to hear the speakers encourage and promote parenting values which I have always held close to my heart! PS: Can't wait for my husband to attend".
